Short but Sweet
 The question I hate the most: "How many children do you have?" When I first meet people, and they ask what do you do, and do you have children, it gets complicated. For many years I would only talk of the living children. As I grew strong enough I was able to own who I was, and would say I have given birth to 4 children, two with feet on the earth, 2 with wings.

Back to School
 Our Father in heaven, We're nearing another changing of seasons. Summer is winding down, and a new school year is beginning - just like it did before. Through this predictable repetition in our calendar and your creation, we see your faithfulness. Help us to look at the sunrise and remember that You always keep Your promises. As we approach another transition sending our children back to school, conflicting emotions wrestle within us. New fears jostle with new hopes. We're happy to send out children back to the classroom, and sad to see them go. We delight in their excitement and worry with them over the unknown. Calm our hearts, Lord, and give us peace. Amen
